HARVARD GOAL SETTING RESEARCH

There was a study done at Harvard between 1979 and 1989. Graduates of the MBA program were asked "Have you set clear written goals for your future and made plans to accomplish them?" The results of that question were:

Only 3% had written goals and plans

13% had goals but not in writing

84% had no specific goals at all

10 years later Harvard interviewed the members of that class again and found:

HARVARD GOAL SETTING RESEARCH

1. The 13% who had goals but not in writing were earning on average twice as much as the 84% of those who had no goals at all

2. The 3% who had clear, written goals were earning on average 10 times as much as the other 97% of graduates all together. The only difference between the groups is the clarity of the goals they had for themselves

YALE GOAL SETTING RESEARCH

In 1953 a team of researchers interviewed Yale's graduating seniors, asking them whether they had written down the specific goals that they wanted to achieve in life.

Twenty years later the researchers tracked down the same cohort and found that the 3% of people who had specific goals all those years before had accumulated more personal wealth than the other 97% of their classmates combined.

Now while there is evidence that people completing Harvard based MBAs do outperform others this is not linked to written goals per se.

Quotes:

"The tragedy in life doesn't lie in not reaching your goal. The tragedy lies in having no goal to reach." - Benjamin Mays

Benjamin underscores the importance of having goals, suggesting that the absence of a clear objective can be a missed opportunity for personal fulfillment.

Have a blue print for 2024, you will never have a chance to miss an opportunity.

Remember, when opportunity meets preparation....its like "Honeymoon"

Quotes:

You are never too old to set another goal or to dream a new dream." - C.S. Lewis

Lewis encourages the idea that age should not limit one's ability to dream and set new goals.

The pursuit of aspirations and goals is a lifelong journey that can continue to evolve and shape one's life.

At your level, at your age....you can still set new goals.
